"I have lived with bouts of insomnia for as long as I can remember.

I'm also no stranger to 'sleep starts' (or 'Hypnic Jerks') - the sudden, involuntary muscle contractions you may experience as you are falling asleep that can send you falling in your dreams.

These are often brought on by an anxious mind or too much caffeine in your diet.

These images are suggestive of the sensation of sleep. This feeling of being somewhere else.

I also wanted to keep it ambiguous as to whether they are floating or falling.

I think they are also a bit of a hangover from lockdown.

The loneliness and solitude we felt, and the longing and desire we had to be somewhere else."
